Witzke E., Wang M., Morris A., Engel J. (2011). Faster, More Accurate, and Q: jQuery countdown timer while using jQuery UI Hey there guys. After hours of research online, I'm still unable to get this working. I'm using this jQuery countdown timer with jQuery UI. I'm not having any errors, but the clock is not updating during the countdown, and nothing shows up when the countdown expires. Any suggestions or help would be greatly appreciated. EDIT: I'm using jquery-ui-1.8.16.custom.css Here's the jQuery: `function countdown_timer() { var date = new Date(); var days = date.getDate(); var hours = date.getHours(); var minutes = date.getMinutes(); var seconds = date.getSeconds(); minutes = minutes And the PHP: A: Did you notice that the script has no DOM element as an argument? (That's what setInterval gets as first argument). You should have: setInterval(countdown_timer,1000); However, the countdown function should not have this setInterval (I'm not sure if it's a typo in the example you linked or not). A: 2 things. You need to pass the date object and the function in one. You need to set the date first. Code: function countdown_timer(d,f) { var date = new Date(d); var days = date.`
